No institution may solicit, recruit, award credentials or operate as a postsecondary educational institution until such authorization is granted by affirmative vote of the Commission.

Seminary Extension Mission Statement

The mission of Seminary Extension is to provide theological education and ministry training of excellent quality to church leaders and members where they live.

Our Faith Statement

The doctrinal/theological principles under which Seminary Extension operates are those set forth in the 2000 Baptist Faith and Message. You may access a copy of this statement at seminaryextension.org (under General Information), or at sbc.net.

Should a different view be expressed in textbooks used with our courses, please know that it may not always reflect our doctrinal position.

Our Governance and Guidance

The Presidents of the six Southern Baptist seminaries comprise our governing board, officially named the Council of Seminary Presidents.

The chief academic officers of the six Southern Baptist seminaries, known as the Academic Council, comprise our curriculum committee, and offer guidance in areas of programs and courses.

Building and Facilities

Our offices are on the fifth floor of the Southern Baptist Convention Building in Nashville. The Southern Baptist Historical Library and Archives (also housed in our building) is incorporated with us under the Council of Seminary Presidents. Personnel of the Executive Committee, the Ethics and Religious Liberty Commission, and the Southern Baptist Foundation also share space with us in this building.

High Quality—Low Cost

Seminary Extension is completely self-supporting. By holding our expenses to the bare essentials, Seminary Extension is able to offer high quality courses at a low cost. We are committed to keeping our cost low so that cost does not become an insurmountable obstacle to individuals seeking theological education and ministry training.

History and Tradition of Seminary Extension

In the years following World War II, Southern Baptists became aware that many of their pastors had only limited formal education for ministry. A denominational study committee reported in 1949 that less than one-third of Southern Baptist ministers had both college and seminary training. At that time, another third had not gone past high school. One of several recommendations from that committee called for the creation of a plan to benefit those “who cannot or, for any reason, do not attend some regular institution of learning.” The presidents of Southern, Southwestern, and New Orleans seminaries responded in December 1950 by voting to establish the Seminary Extension Department.

R. Lee Gallman, an Alabama pastor, was elected the first director of the program. Seminary Extension officially began operation in the Mississippi Baptist Building on June 15, 1951. Developing seminary type courses was Gallman’s first task. Among those first courses were some on the Old and New Testaments, homiletics, and Christian doctrine. The first students were enrolled for correspondence study. Extension centers were set up within the first year, however, and by the fall of 1952 they were operating in at least six states. By the time Gallman resigned in 1960, more than 3,000 students were enrolled.

Although not a part of the Southern Baptist Seminaries themselves, Seminary Extension has received support from the Seminaries throughout its existence. In fact, more than 90 percent of its operating budget in the earliest years came from the sponsoring seminaries. Seminary Extension no longer receives monetary support from the seminaries. However, their support is present in other ways. The six presidents of the Southern Baptist Convention seminaries constitute Seminary Extension’s governing board, and their chief academic officers make up our academic council. Numerous faculty members from all of the seminaries have, and continue, to write Seminary Extension courses.

North Carolina pastor, Ralph A. Herring, became director in 1961, serving until 1968. Under his leadership the number of course offerings continued to expand, and in 1963 the offices were moved from Jackson, MS to Nashville, Tennessee, to the Southern Baptist Convention Building. Seminary Extension experienced continuous growth through the decade of the 1970s.

Raymond M. Rigdon became director in 1969. He concentrated on upgrading the quality of the courses while continuing to expand the curriculum. A major step during his administration was gaining accreditation for the correspondence program through the National Home Study Council, (now known as the Distance Education and Training Council). We have been accredited through DETC since 1972.

From 1981 to 1990, Seminary Extension was part of the Seminary External Education Division. A new Seminary Studies Department offered master's level courses at up to seven sites around the country. Those off-campus programs were placed under the administration of individual seminaries in 1990, and the new department and division were dissolved.

Doran C. McCarty, a former faculty member at Midwestern Seminary, The Southern Baptist Seminary, and Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, served as executive director of Seminary Extension from August 1, 1988 through December 31, 1996. Under his leadership, Seminary Extension expanded to about 450 centers and served over 6,000 students in the United States and abroad.

W. Edward Thiele, a professor from New Orleans Seminary, assumed the role of executive director on January 1, 1997. Under his leadership, Seminary Extension approached the new millennium, and its fiftieth anniversary, with a goal of reaching students through new methodologies, strategies, and delivery systems.

William E. Vinson, a professor at Southwestern Seminary and its Director of Undergraduate and Lay Theological Studies became the director in August 2001. He placed Seminary Extension on a sound financial footing and then used the vehicle to extend sound theological education around the world.

With the retirement of Dr. Vinson in May 2007, the Council of Seminary Presidents chose Randal A. Williams as Seminary Extension's new director. His goal is to continue to offer the excellent theological education and ministry training that Southern Baptists have come to expect. To accomplish this goal, Seminary Extension has revised and repackaged its curriculum.

Tradition of Service

Seminary Extension's learning resources are rooted in a deep reverence for the Bible as the divinely inspired Word of God and the authoritative guide for human conduct. Seminary Extension's interpretation of God's Word is in keeping with the 2000 Baptist Faith and Message. Its curriculum and resources grow out of the conviction that God expects Christians to search the Scriptures with open and inquiring minds in order to know and follow God's will. Therefore, Seminary Extension designs its courses to assist Christians in the serious academic study of the Bible and its teachings in order that they may become effective in Christian ministry.

A Letter from the Director

Baptists face many challenges today. I believe that one of the greatest is biblical illiteracy. This is not a new problem, but it continues to grow. I am also convinced that churches are generally an accurate reflection of their pastors and leaders. When leaders believe that theological education and training for better service is important, then their churches generally follow their lead. In 1949, statistical data showed that a large percentage of the pastors in the Southern Baptist Convention did not have any seminary training. This was not necessarily by choice. Many of them recognized the value of theological and ministry training, but were simply unable to attend a traditional institution for higher learning. Although many of these men were certainly not biblically illiterate, they were often ill-equipped for doing ministry and teaching others how to do the same. That meant that many of the volunteer servant/leaders within the church, such as Sunday School leaders/teachers, deacons, musicians and so on, were also struggling to do the ministry to which God had called them. Miraculously, God used and continues to use His willing servants in marvelous ways. The church must not, however, simply continue in its present state as if God receives more glory when His work is done by uneducated, but faithful, servants. Simply put, that would be a misapplication of Paul's words in 2 Corinthians 12:10: "Therefore I am well content with weaknesses . . . for when I am weak, then I am strong (NAU).” To give our best to God, we must be both well educated and faithful. Although God has not abandoned His work, we have not been relieved of our responsibility to be disciplined in our study or faithful in our service so that we can better know and serve Him.

In 2 Timothy 2:15, Paul reminds Timothy and, by implication, believers of all ages that we are to study God’s word so that it may be rightly applied to our lives. Study and application of this kind means that believers must do more than simply read God’s word. They are to drink deeply from it for life, refreshment, and service. Commitment to the in-depth study of God’s word is strengthened when men and women are guided by gifted teachers.

Southern Baptists recognized the importance of such guidance long ago. In 1951, the Southern Baptist Convention responded to the need for more opportunities for theological education and ministry training by establishing Seminary Extension. Since that time, Seminary Extension has provided an affordable and effective vehicle for delivering off-campus theological education and ministry training opportunities for pastors and other church servants alike.

The goal of Seminary Extension is to provide an opportunity for biblically accurate theological education and ministry training to every interested believer. We do not seek to replace a seminary education, but focus on those who cannot for any reason attend a seminary. Our courses are biblical and reflect the values and theology of the Southern Baptist Convention, as they are stated in the 2000 Baptist Faith and Message. To meet our goal, Seminary Extension delivers quality education using as many methods as possible. For instance, many students take courses in a local classroom provided by state/associational offices or churches. Students may also complete the courses through written correspondence, or on the Internet.

Biblical illiteracy is not the only challenge faced by the church today. However, I believe that it is one of the greatest. At Seminary Extension, we are dedicated to educating and training men and women in order to increase their love for God and their service to Him.

Types of Seminary Extension Courses

Seminary Extension offers two types of courses, Level One and Level Two.

Level One Courses

These courses do not carry transferable credit. Level One series courses may only be used in our Certificate in Church Work program. Students may not use them toward our diploma programs.

Level One courses are designed to help ministers and other church members in the practical areas of Bible study and Christian ministry. Students who prefer easy-to-read materials will find these courses especially helpful. These courses are also beneficial for individuals for whom English is a second language. Although dealing with adult concepts, each course is written on a simplified reading level. For most of these courses, a study guide is the only textbook (BS 10, BS 11, BS 15 and BS 16 are exceptions, using the Bible and sharing the same textbook for all four). No written tests are required. There are a couple of options for taking these courses. Many are available through Southern Baptist churches, state and associational offices. All Level Ones courses may be taken directly with Seminary Extension by independent study. We have provided a description of these courses under the Catalog heading “Level One Courses.”

Level Two Courses

More than sixty courses are included in this series. These courses are ideally suited for persons who have completed at least their high school diploma but have been unable to continue their education. Individuals may enroll without a high school diploma, GED, or equivalent but may only earn credit toward a Seminary Extension certificate or a diploma. These students must show an ability to benefit from individual courses before enrolling in a Seminary Extension program. Course credit earned by these students cannot be transferred to other educational institutions.

Level Two courses successfully completed by students with a high school diploma or equivalent may be transferred to other institutions. (For more information on this topic, consult the section entitled “SE Policies, Transcripts” in this catalog.) Although many institutions have accepted credits earned through Seminary Extension, we must inform you that no institution is required to do so. If you intend to transfer Seminary Extension credits in the future, you should contact any school to which you intend to transfer credit before enrolling in a Seminary Extension course.

Level Two courses provide excellent learning opportunities for all church members, including volunteer or laypersons, bivocational and fully-compensated ministers, and individuals who are simply interested in personal spiritual growth. In fact, some of our students are seminary graduates who find these courses helpful as refresher studies as they minister. Most Level Two courses are available for study at either extension centers or through independent study. Some Level Two courses are also available as Internet courses.

Methods of Study

For your convenience, Seminary Extension offers several methods of study: Group study, Self-directed Independent Study, and Internet. Internet classes have a published start and end date (see the description below), but students set their own calendar for other methods of study.

Group or Classroom Study (Local Opportunities)

Many SBC state and local associational offices recognize the value of Seminary Extension training and offer to help students in their areas by providing a classroom setting for completing Seminary Extension courses. In this option, you study with friends and neighbors in a classroom setting under the guidance of a Seminary Extension approved teacher using Seminary Extension materials. Call us or visit our website for locations and contact information.

Self-directed Study (Independent Study)

This method is the foundation for all Seminary Extension courses. Using this method, students study in their own setting via correspondence with a qualified instructor. Once you order your materials from Seminary Extension, we assign you an instructor, and you simply study at your own pace.

Internet

Internet courses are available as an interactive distance learning option. These courses are offered on a semester system. Classes run for approximately 14 weeks, and are offered 3 times per calendar year beginning on the 3rd Monday in January, May, and August.

Prices for classes taught in this format include an additional administrative fee of $60.00. Please see our website, www.seminaryextension.org, or call us at (800) 229-4612 for the latest information on courses offered, registration dates, and prices.

Seminary Extension Programs

Seminary Extension is more than a program centered educational organization. We promote the concept that Christians should be life-long learners. Therefore, we encourage students to take as many individual courses as they desire. Rather than working toward a specific Certificate or Diploma, many of our students take individual courses as they are currently applicable to them. Others find it helpful to work toward a specific goal. In order to help our students toward a life-long commitment of study, we currently offer eight programs as incentive.

Certificate Programs

We designed our certificates to enhance the biblical and theological knowledge of our students while emphasizing immediate, practical, and active application. Whether our students complete one course or a program of courses, we believe that their lives and ministries will be enriched through the process.

One of our ministry goals is to equip and lead students toward personal growth for the benefit of the local church. To achieve this goal, Seminary Extension offers certificate programs in the following areas: Church Work; Bi-vocational Ministry; Lay Ministry Training; and Women's Ministry.

Diploma in Theological Foundations

Seminary extension offers this Program in order to encourage students to continue their education. As stated in the introduction of our programs, Seminary Extension promotes the idea that Christians should be students for life. As a part of our commitment to this idea, we are pleased to offer a program that rewards students for their continued efforts in theological education and ministry training. In order to earn this diploma, students must already have a diploma from Seminary Extension or must have completed something equivalent to or greater than our diploma at another accredited institution. Once enrolled, students must take an additional 16 courses from our Level Two curriculum. These courses should be selected in consultation with Seminary Extension staff.

General Objectives of Curriculum Areas

We have written the overall learning objectives of our courses in light of our purpose statement. These objectives aid curriculum planners and writers in developing and evaluating the curriculum design and course materials. Finally, we have organized our courses into areas of study typically found in standard theological and ministry curricula.

LEVEL TWO COURSES

Our level two curriculum is designed to challenge students with the academics of a college course while maintaining a deliberate focus on relevant and immediate application. Although these courses may be used for the completion of one of our certificates or diplomas, each is designed to stand alone.

Biblical Studies Curriculum

Our prayer is that students studying in the Biblical Studies area will do the following:

- (1) Seek, with growing interest and devotion, to understand God's revelation through His Word, and then to respond in faith, love, and obedience
- (2) Gain increasing understanding of the facts and truths recorded in the Bible, and then to recognize the relationship of these facts and truths to each other in light of the total biblical revelation
- (3) Develop a sound understanding of and appreciation for the nature of the Bible and the ways in which an infinite God used finite human beings to record His Word
- (4) Develop understanding and skills needed to interpret the Bible in the light of sound biblical scholarship
- (5) Learn to select, and use effectively in Bible study, resource materials such as lexicons, concordances, dictionaries, encyclopedias, and commentaries

Total course cost does not include shipping and handling. This fee is based on the total cost of the student's order at the time of shipping. For this fee, see the shipping and handling chart under the Catalog heading "Fees and Charges." Students must add this fee to the total after calculating the total cost of individual courses and textbooks chosen.

Transcripts

A number of colleges and institutions have, and continue to accept Seminary Extension Level Two course credits toward their undergraduate degrees as well as their certificate and diploma programs. Any student desiring to take Seminary Extension courses in order to transfer them to another school should contact the receiving institution of choice before enrolling with Seminary Extension.

Students must meet all the enrolment qualifications and take a monitored final examination provided by Seminary Extension in order for a class to qualify for transfer credit.

When Seminary Extension sends a transcript, it is up to the receiving institution to evaluate the transcript to determine how much, if any, course credit they will accept.

Requesting a Transcript

Seminary Extension will issue transcripts to other educational institutions upon receipt of a signed, written request from the student along with a $10.00 fee. Grades and courses are shown, with a recommendation of semester hours. Transcript requests cannot be taken by telephone. A request must be received in writing directly from the student, along with the fee for this service, before a transcript can be issued. Upon request from the student, an unofficial record of courses completed may be sent to students and designated agencies at no charge. In order to assure the timely issuance of a transcript, all tests and assignments must be received by Seminary Extension at least four weeks prior to the date that a transcript is required.

Credit from Other Sources

Outside credit acceptance toward a certificate in Church Work
Seminary Extension does not transcript the Level One courses used in our Certificate in Church Work program, and will not accept outside credit toward this certificate program.

Outside credit acceptance toward other certificate and diploma programs

Seminary Extension may accept, by transcript, a limited amount of course credit toward a certificate in one of our eight-course certificate programs. Based on an evaluation of the student's official transcript, we will accept a maximum of four courses from an institution accredited by a Council on Higher Education Accreditation (CHEA) approved accreditation agency. Seminary Extension will also evaluate, on an individual basis, credits from non-accredited schools and accept them as deemed appropriate by the Registrar and Director.

Seminary Extension may also accept, by transcript, course credit toward a diploma in one of our sixteen-course programs. Based on an evaluation of your official transcript, we will accept a maximum of eight courses from an institution accredited by a Council on Higher Education Accreditation (CHEA) approved accreditation agency. Seminary Extension will also evaluate, on an individual basis, credits from non-accredited schools and accept them as deemed appropriate by the Registrar and Director.

Transcripts evaluated for transfer must be received in a sealed envelope from the issuing institution, must be signed by the institution's registrar, must bear a school seal, and have the date of issuance. The student should inform Seminary Extension that the transcript is coming. They should also indicate the Seminary Extension program in which they are interested.

Our Relationship with Other SBC Institutions

Although Seminary Extension is incorporated under the SBC Council of Seminary Presidents, our programs are separate from the undergraduate programs offered by individual SBC seminaries. Like all other undergraduate institutions, they are not required to accept Seminary Extension credits towards their undergraduate degrees but may choose to do so when deemed appropriate. Therefore, students should contact the institution into which they may wish to transfer Seminary Extension credits before enrolling.

Studying with Seminary Extension

Students may study at home through correspondence or via the Internet. They may also study in groups at a local center near where they live.

If the student chooses to study by correspondence, the course begins when the student registers. Seminary Extension allows up to six months from the date of registration to complete the work. When the student enrolls, Seminary Extension sends an Independent Study Kit along with other course materials to them. During their study, students send assignments such as tests and papers to Seminary Extension, where we log their arrival and forward them on to qualified instructors for grading. Instructors correct and provide feedback on these assignments, record the grade and send them back to the student. At the end of the course, a proctored final exam is given. Like the other assignments, this exam is also sent to Seminary Extension instructors for evaluation. In order to pass the course, students must complete the course with an average grade of 70 or above to receive a passing grade for the course. They must also make a 70 or above in order for the class to be eligible for transfer of credit.

If a student chooses to study via an Internet course, Seminary Extension provides them with the necessary instructions for signing into the course on the Internet. Once logged into the course, students simply complete the assignments and submit them for interaction with their instructors. A proctored final is still required.

Students may also study Seminary Extension courses in a group setting. Often located in SBC state and associational offices or in local SBC churches, Seminary Extension centers can be found in most of the United States, and in several foreign countries.

In fact, each year thousands of individuals such as pastors, other church workers, and church volunteers continue their education for ministry and personal growth by studying Seminary Extension courses in a group setting. These centers offer locally sponsored programs of organized study that are designed to help Christians gain the understanding and skill needed for competent Christian ministry. These centers must be certified by Seminary Extension before classes can be offered. Historically, Baptist associations have established most of the centers. In fact, some associations have multiple centers. Individual local Southern Baptist churches have also taken on the challenge of educating their members as well as others in their area who are interested. Seminary Extension does not own or control these sites. However, sponsors approved by

Seminary Extension must agree to operate their centers according to the following guidelines:

- Centers affiliated with Seminary Extension must maintain the educational standards set forth by Seminary Extension
- Centers must agree to use the course materials prepared and distributed by Seminary Extension
- Centers must submit the appropriate registration fees, reports, student enrollment information, and course work to Seminary Extension

Students enrolled in these centers have found that group learning experiences provide both encouragement and fellowship. Often students learn from each other as well as from their instructor. Regular class meetings require them to exercise a disciplined approach to their study.

Persons interested in establishing a center to train persons in their church, association, or region, may request information and assistance from Seminary Extension. Seminary Extension assists sponsoring groups in several ways:

- by recommending an effective plan for establishing and operating an extension center
- by providing excellent theological training materials
- by maintaining academic records on individual students

All instructors must be certified by Seminary Extension before a class begins. To be certified to teach a Level Two course, individuals must have a master's degree or its equivalent from a seminary, university, or college accredited by a nationally recognized (CHEA-affiliated) accrediting body.

Although there are no specific educational requirements for certification to teach a Level One course, sponsoring groups are encouraged to recruit the best qualified persons available.

All Seminary Extension teachers must agree to teach in accordance with the 2000 Baptist Faith and Message.

Although the cost submitted to Seminary Extension for an individual course is the same for all students, local center administration fees may be slightly different. The total fee paid by the student is made up of three parts: (1) a registration fee, which is the same for all students and must be paid to Seminary Extension; (2) the amount that the center director and committee determine is needed to meet local operating expenses; (3) and the cost of textbook(s) for the course. A student who already has the prescribed textbook is not required to buy another copy. For the exact price of textbooks, check specific course descriptions above, or contact Seminary Extension. Textbook prices are subject to change at any time. To help speed up the ordering process, Seminary Extension often sends the materials used by extension centers on consignment. Centers must send student registration forms, payment for materials, and all unused materials within 30 days of the first class meeting.

Continuing Education Units

Students may be able to receive Continuing Education Units (CEU) for course work done in a classroom setting. The student must register as a participating student in the class, and they must have an agreement with the instructor prior to beginning course work.

Although the course exams are not required, students must adhere to normal attendance practices, engage in classroom participation, and turn in any required homework assignments. Finally, the student must write a paper describing how they intend to use the things they have learned in the course. At the end of the course, students will receive a grade of S=satisfactory or U=unsatisfactory.

A student cannot earn both academic and CEU credit for the same course. It has to be one or the other and the student must declare their intention at the beginning of the course. A CEU transcript may be obtained from Seminary Extension with the same guidelines used for regular academic transcripts. One (1) CEU will be awarded for each ten (10) hours or portions thereof (i.e. 15 hours = 1.5 CEU's) of classroom work completed.
